What is the 'Remote Access'

- When you are outside of campus, you can access the full text of journal articles or electronic books on ScienceDirect by signing in with your ScienceDirect account.
- This feature is available for 180 days once you successfully sign in. If it is expired, you can reactivate it on the website.

How to activate remote access on the ScienceDirect

1. Access to the ScienceDirect (www.sciencedirect.com) in campus IP range
2. Select the 'Remote access' link on the left-top of the ScienceDirect.
3. Enter your university e-mail address on the 'Apply for remote access' page
4. Register for your username and password to sign onto ScienceDirect. If you have an account of ScienceDirect or Scopus, select the 'Continue without registering' link.
5. You will receive an e-mail with a remote access activation link. From the e-mail, select the activation link. (The activation expires within one hour after you receive the e-mail.)
6. Move to the ScienceDirect and sign in (Signing in with your account extends your remote access to 180 days. If you do not sign in, your remote access will expire at the end of your ScienceDirect session)
